Wessex Mill was built as a new mill, replacing the old local Onsley Mill in 1980. The milling machines date back to 1935. This is a small and slow running roller mill which produces flour in a cool milling process, preserving the natural taste and quality of the grain.

The company runs a small mill which is used primarily to supply specialist craft bakers. They have a good range of flour and flour products which can be ordered on line or obtained from their stockists.

Wessex Mill flour is a good standard which I have used on many occasions to provide satisfying basic bread. I am pleased when I see this flour, as I know the quality is superior to most commercial flours. The fact that it is produced well outside of my zone of activity means that I do not use this brand as often as others, but it is a brand that I fully recommend.
