Built in 1821 to replace watermills that were no longer viable after the building of the Kennet and Avon Canal, this 4 sail tower mill is now restored to working order. It produces flour for its own shop sales and supplies a small number of local outlets.

The Wilton Windmill Society, formed in 1976, runs and maintains the mill and organises visits and events. The mill is generally open to visitors on Sundays and bank holidays, but check on the website first.

The amount of flour produced is relatively small, so you have to be local to benefit from this quality flour.
